Who's That Girl?

A NEW WAVE OF YOUNG STARLETS MADE A SPLASH ON THE RED CARPET THIS SEASON. HERE, SOME UP-AND-COMING ACTRESSES WHOM HOLLYWOOD INSIDERS AND BEAUTY EXECUTIVES ARE KEEPING AN EYE ON. —MICHELLE EDGAR

ZOOEY AND EMILY DESCHANEL

"The Deschanel girls are really going to be hot. Both of them are charming, outgoing, fun and gorgeous. Having a combination of looks plus charm plus smarts is why they're on my radar."

—DIANNE KAVRA, VICE PRESIDENT OF PUBLIC RELATIONS, SIGOR BEAUTY

CAMILLA BELLE

"Camilla Belle is making a name for herself in both fashion and Hollywood. She did a great job in The Ballad of Jack and Rose. It's not easy to stand up to the talent of Daniel Day-Lewis. And she also loves fashion."

—PAMELA BAXTER, PRESIDENT & CEO, LYMH PERFUMES & COSMETICS, NORTH AMERICA

AMY ADAMS

"She's like a young Julia Roberts. She had such a breakthrough performance [in Juno], which garnered an Academy Award nomination. She's exquisitely dressed, young and fresh—seems to me like a star."

—JOHN DENSEY, GLOBAL PRESIDENT, ESTÉE LAUDER

AUDREY TATOÛ

"All eyes will be on her since she's starring in one of the biggest movies of the year, The Dar Vini Code. She's not a classic all-American beauty; she has an exotic appeal and a mature and sophisticated look. People are going to be hot for her."

—MARC MALKIN, REPORTER, THE INSIDER

EMMA ROBERTS

"From UglyBetty back to when she was a little girl in Blair, she's now starring in Nancy Drew. She's talented and has a 'girl-next-door' look but her beauty isn't intimidating. There's something about her that makes you want to be her friend."

—ALANA KLEIMAN, DIRECTOR OF CASTING, 20TH CENTURY FOX

AMANDA BYNES

"She has a great sense of comic timing and is very believable as an actress. Her name conjures up the phrases 'all-American beauty' and 'fresh-faced.' She has a dazzling social life but also knows when to leave the party before things get out of hand—and leaves them wanting more."

—ALISON BROD, PRESIDENT AND OWNER, ALISON BROD PR

RACHEL MCADAMS

"Her look is really appealing, and she's a talented actress, very comfortable in her own skin. She's earned good will from women by declining to pose nude on the Vanity Fair Hollywood cover. She's a classic good old movie star in the making and a chameleon."

—JANICE MIN, EDITOR IN CHIEF, US WEEKLY

Great Lengths

From rapidly shrinking waistlines to perma-tans, Hollywood is the motherland of outrageous beauty fixes. The newest: eyelash extensions. Individual false lashes that are meticulously applied one by one with a waterproof adhesive. Stars like Lindsay Lohan and Jennifer Lopez are fans of the service, which can last up to two months with touch-ups and can cost anywhere from $200 to $600. Salons nationwide are catching on, too. The John Barrett Salon in New York City offers Lavish Lashes, one of the many eyelash extension services currently on the market. Jo Mousseil, the brains behind Xtreme Lashes, another popular provider, credits the trend to the modern woman's unending quest for glamour. Says Mousseil, "Lash extensions are the least invasive method of changing a woman's look—she can virtually go from girl next door to sex pistol in the wink of an eye." —MEGAN MCINTYRE
